He was breathing. But unconscious, and the crew of a south bound train who discovered him placed the unfortunate man on an engine and sent him to the depot in this city from which place he was taken to the Alexandais Heavital. He soon avaired with terribly mangled condition. His left dria Hospital. He soon expired with-out being able to give his name or how he became in his pitiable plight. No one at the depot or in the railroad office in this city could give his name this morning, although it was known that he was a trackwalker in the gang in charge of Sectionmaster Brophy. The latter could not be found. The general impression seemed to be that the man's death was the result of an accident, although it is possible that he was a vic-tim of foul play, as it is said that when found his right hand was in a position to indicate that he was in the act of reathing for his pistol before he received his mortal injuries. The remains were taken to Mr. B. Wheatley's undertaking lishment.

After the above was written, Dr. W. M. Smith, who attended the man, learned that his name was Floyd Henderson, and that he was a native of Glade Spring, Washington county.
